HOW MUCH DO YOU REALLY KNOW ABOUT THIS LOOMING FISCAL CLIFF BUSINESS?

Los Angeles Times

Fears are growing that the nation is hurtling toward the so-called "fiscal cliff"—a combination of expiring tax cuts and automatic federal spending reductions that would take effect at the start of the new year unless Congress acts to stop it. Most economists predict the nation will fall into recession if no action is taken. So how much do you really know about this topic? Try your luck at this quiz to find out.

- The term fiscal cliff dates back decades, but who was the first prominent government official to use it to describe the situation facing the U.S. government in 2013?
- a President Obama
- b. Federal Reserve Chairman Ben S.
   Bernanke
- c. Treasury Secretary Timothy F. Geithner
- d. House Speaker John Boehner
- Tax rates are set to go up for all brackets Jan. I with the expiration of the George W. Bush-era tax cuts, What would the top tax rate be if the cuts expire?
- a. 40 percent
- b. 39.6 percent
- c. 36.6 percent
- d. 35 percent

- Nearly 90 percent of households would see a tax increase in 2013 because of the expiration of various tax cuts. What would the approximate average tax increase be?
- a. $1,500
- b. $2,500
- c.$3,500
- d.$4,500

- What part of the federal budget would take the biggest percentage cut under the automatic spending reductions known as the sequester that begin next year?
- a. Medicare
- b. Social Security
- c. Defense programs
- d. Non-defense programs
- What would the unemployment rate be in the fourth quarter of 2013 under the latest Congressional Budget Office estimate of the fiscal cliff's effects?
- a. 8.5 percent
- b. 8.7 percent
- c. 8.9 percent
- d. 91 percent

Dieting success: It's in the pants

Before this fall, I had never been on a diet. This fact makes me a rarity both as an American and as a woman. Research shows that by age 13, an estimated 53 percent of American girls are unhappy with their bodies, and 67 percent of women in America are currently trying to lose weight.

Yet despite my weight fluctuating over time, I have never counted calories or restricted fats. I have gained the freshman 15, lost 30 during my hippie phase, gained a few during post-college depression and then lost some more during 5K training.

But this was all the unintentional, normal fluctuation of life and, to be honest, I was pretty OK with it ... until I found the jeans.

Years ago, I stowed away a pair of beautiful dark wash skinny jeans I purchased in Argentina. I happened to find them when I was cleaning out my closet for fall and desperately wanted to fit into them despite the fact that they were a solid size too small. Knowing I couldn't re-create my disco-dancing-all-night lifestyle that slimmed my body down to fit into the skinny jeans five years ago, I decided to go on a DIET.

After hearing my co-workers' rave reviews, I went on the South Beach Diet, which involves eating nothing but vegetables and egg substitute for weeks on end. I managed to stay on the diet for two weeks, losing a large chunk of weight and in the end, totally hating myself.

I turned into this barely recognizable, diet-obsessed crazy woman, talking almost exclusively about my meal plans and yearning for bread on an hourly basis. During those two weeks, I was just a sad, carb-free sack of calories in and calories out.

In the midst of holiday season, I am determined not to become this crazy person again. It is not worth losing myself just to lose enough weight to fit into 5-year-old jeans.

This season, thanks to some incensefueled, yogi-style soul searching, Pm skipping all the holiday diet bull and doing my own little routine I'm calling the yoga-pants diet.

The first and only tenet of the yoga-pants diet is to wear yoga pants whenever possible. They are stretchy, versatile and never require a belt. They are a true gift from Santa, who you know is rocking stretchy pants under

And as long as I'm wearing the yoga pants I might as well remind myself of the one simple thing yoga teaches me every practice: this body, this life, this world is a true gift for which I am thankful, and therefore I shall neither count calories nor stuff myself so full of mashed potatoes that I fall into a starchinduced coma until NYE.

In my yoga-pants world, it is that simple. Sometimes in our plentiful lives we get so caught up in the idea of scarcity, of not enough. There is never enough time, enough money, enough sugar cookies. So we gorge. We work 60-hour weeks, trample each other for Black Friday deals and consume enough gravy to float the Nina, Pinta and Santa

But as Lifetime Christmas movies have taught me, we have enough. Stuffing yourself today won't keep you satisfied tomorrow; it only makes you hungrier.

> For those of you who think all this yoga stuff is for hippy crazies, I suggest you wear the yoga pants anyway: Even if they don't make you feel Zen, they will make your ass look great. Thanks, Santa. NIKIERITZISA REDEVE SPECIAL

FACEBOOK COPYRIGHTS AND WRONGS

Logged on to Facebook at all during the past few days? Of course you have. You've probably seen a few posts declaring a copyright on all material the user posts. You know, the Abraham Lincoln-esque one that uses the word 'hereby' a few times.

There's a section in the agreement called "Rights and Responsibilities," and its first bullet point states that you've granted Facebook a "non-exclusive, transferable, sub-licensable, royally-free, worldwide license" to all the intellectual property content you post.

Guess what: That copyright statement won't help. When you signed up for Facebook, you essentially signed a contract allowing the folks at Facebook to do as they please with your information.

So what does that mean? You can't charge anyone royalties for using your pictures, you can't take legal action if Facebook uses your personal Information and you certainly can't mandate that anyone get written approval from you before using anything on your page, as the copyright statement that's been popping up on feeds everywhere suggests. Your only real option if this is all a big concern is to just delete your account.

So do yourself a favor: Don't post that copyright statement. It won't protect you, and you'll just end up looking like a tool for buying into the hype.

Some guys embark on epic man celebrations before becoming fathers. Call it the dad-chelor party.

By Mick Swasko

REDEYE

It was midnight when Courtney Everette drove to the airport to pick up her husband in the summer of 2009, and she found what she expected. Tre Everette was burnt out and tired from a weekend at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, where he and friends had celebrated what was to be a major life event for him and his wife.

Tre, 35, of Woodlawn, hadn't spent the weekend in a private poolside cabana as a last fling before impending nuptials. He'd already done that years before. His wife was seven months pregnant, and this was his "dad-chelor" party.

"I did not want him to go," Courtney Everette said, laughing. "I didn't think his impending fatherhood was an excuse to go sit on a beach."

But after laying a few ground rules-he couldn't leave the country, and his friends would have to pay for the whole thingshe agreed to let her husband have one last fling with the guys before parental responsibility set in. So-called dad-chelor parties, also known as daddymoons, diaper kegs and man showers, are becoming increasingly popular for fathers-to-be. The pregnancy website thebump.com reports one in five male users in a recent survey say they've been to one. Though the name suggests a raucous, booze-soaked celebration reminiscent of the pre-wedding tradition, several Chicago-area dad-chelors say the occasion isn't what you might expect.

"It was full-disclosure," Tre Everette said of his party, which replaced club-going and gambling with several days of soaking up the sun. What happened in Vegas didn't even need to stay there, he said. He told his wife everything, "For Vegas, it was really low-key."

The point was to spend time with friends, some of whom already had kids, and get some perspective on how his life was about to change, Everette said.

"It's the kind of thing where guys can share the war stories of being a first-time dad and assure everybody it would be OK," he said.

It's a trend Chris Easter, co-founder of themanregistry.com. an online resource for grooms, has noticed as well. Five years ago, he started the site to, among other things, serve the growing population of men he saw having "man showers," or prewedding male gatherings where gifts like kegerators and grill tools are commonplace. At the time, he said it was considered odd, but his website's growth has proved the idea has moved to the mainstream. He said he sees dad-chelor parties building that "The principle is the same thing [as a bachelor party]," he said. "They align perfectly. It's a big lifestyle moment, it's celebrating the end of one chapter and starting another."

Twin brothers Matt and Martin Klara, 31, hadn't even heard of the concept when they began planning dad-chelor parties for each other in 2011. It was Matt's idea to plan one last day of carmaraderie for his brother as his wife's due date approached. It started with a haircut and a shave at a barbershop, went on to a brewery tour, included a private BBO dinner at Chicago O and ended at several of Martin's favorite bars. It also included a sentimental gift from the group of 20 guys who attended—a copy of Walker Lamond's "Rules for my Unborn Son." Each of the men wrote his own rules into the book. (Example: If you ever want to know the absolute truth, ask your uncles.)

"You don't get many chances to be kind of sentimental with friends, so it was nice to have all that in one spot," Martin Klara, of Oak Park, said.

In return, Martin planned a dad-chelor party for Matt when he found out Matt would become a dad several months later. It was a similar affair, with Martin giving Matt an autographed copy of the book he received months before. The events sparked something of a tradition for the two, with Matt, of Lincoln Park, tweeting advice and tips from the Twitter handle @dadchelor and both planning two more parties for friends.

Matt said he catches flak for promoting the idea of the parties, especially from people on Twitter who assume a dad-chelor party is a mirror image of a bachelor party. He is quick to correct

*It's not about leaving your pregnant wife at home and getting drunk and running around the city for the night," he said. "It's about going out and having a memorable experience in your city." MSWASKO@TRIBUNE.COM | @MICKSWASKO

GIFTS FOR THE DAD-CHELO

Fatherhood marks the beginning of more responsibility for the dad-to-be. Of course, that doesn't mean it's the end of all the things he used to enjoy. RedEye scoped out themanregistry.com, an online source for grooms, for gifts that work well for future fathers. M.S.

Remote control cooler

Price: $79.99

Why dads need it: The cooler can be driven in any direction-Indoors or out-with the help of a remote control. It's the site's best seller, and it works for dads who can't leave the couch for a cold one.

Mastering the Grill

Price: $24.95

Why dads need it: Let's face it: There are going to be a lot of late, sleepless nights. Dads can at least brush up on the stereotypical fatherhood skill of grilling meat while they're awake.

BACHELOR OF DAD-CHELOR

Louisville Slugger personalized bat

Price: $52.99

Why dads need it: A genuine Louisville Slugger is a pretty smooth gift, especially for a father-to-be who is expecting an athlete. The personalization can be used to engrave the date of the dad-chelor party, adding a nice touch.

Team logo coffee travel mugs

Price: Varies

Why dads need it If they aren't drinking coffee yet, they will be. The registry has paired stainless steel travel mugs and ceramic cups for the commute and the office.

Lockout tool kit

Price:$16.95

Why dads need it: Getting locked out of the car wasn't the biggest deal before, but it can be a nightmare for a dad who needs to get to the carseat. The seven-piece set is used by the towing industry, and it can open domestic and foreign vehicles.

You just ripped our hearts out'

Chicago Tribune

A high school sophomore studying to be an architect was shot to death as she stood with friends in a backyard in Chicago Lawn, police said.

Porshe Foster, 15, was with several other teens when someone walked up and opened fire around 9:20 p.m. Monday in the 6900 block of South Campbell Avenue, according to police News Affairs Officer Hector Alfaro, citing preliminary information.

Foster was a sophomore at Ace Technical Charter High School, where she played basketball and volleyball and was studying to be an architect, her mother said. Bonita Foster asked for prayers for her family, and she urged anyone with information about the shooting to go to the police.

"This thing has to be stopped," Foster said.
"It's foolishness. The only thing that was accomplished is that you just ripped our hearts out of our chests. And for what?"

Community activist Andrew Holmes also called on "anybody that knows any information, just turn this information over. Someone that was in that crew knows who fired and discharged that weapon and took that young lady's life.

3rd allegation against puppeteer

NEW YORK The puppeteer formerly behind the "Sesame Street" character Elmo faces a new accusation of having sex with an underage boy, a week after a similar allegation prompted him to resign from the iconic public TV show.

In a lawsuit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, a man identified only as John alleges Kevin Clash engaged in oral sex and other sex acts with him when John was 16 years old. The suit seeks at least $75,000 in damages.

The suit alleges the incident occurred in either 2000 or 2001 when John, who is from Florida, visited New York for modeling opportunities. John came to know Clash, then 40, through a telephone chat line for gay people on which Clash claimed to be a 30-year-old named Craig, according to the suit.

John returned to New York when he turned 18, and he and Clash renewed the relationship, the lawsuit said.

"Mr. Clash believes the lawsuit has no merit," Clash's publicist, Risa B. Heller, said in an emailed statement.

It is the latest charge levied against Clash, now 52, who resigned Nov. 20 from Sesame Workshop, the company behind "Sesame Street," after nearly 30 years on the show.

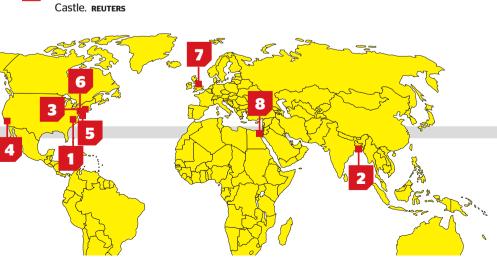

His resignation came the same day Cecil Singleton filed a claim seeking more than $5 million in damages from Clash. Singleton claims he met the then-32-year-old puppeteer in 1993 in a gay chat room when he was 15.

The newest allegation comes about two weeks after another man recanted his claims that Clash had sex with him when he was 16 years old. The man later said the relationship was consensual.

Clash had denied the allegations and acknowledged a past relationship with his first accuser. He added the pair were both consenting adults at the time.

Tensions rise in Cairo

CAIRO Tens of thousands Egyptians protested Tuesday against President Mohamed Mursi in one of the biggest rallies since Hosni Mubarak's overthrow, accusing the Islamist leader of seeking to impose a new era of autocracy.

Police fired tear gas at stone-throwing vouths in streets near the main protest in Cairo's Tahrir Square, the epicenter of the uprising that toppled Mubarak last year. Clashes between Mursi's opponents and supporters erupted in a city north of Cairo.

But violence could not overshadow the show of strength by the normally divided opponents of Islamists in power, posing Mursi with the biggest challenge in his five months in office.

"The people want to bring down the regime," protesters in Tahrir chanted, echoing slogans used in the 2011 revolt.

Protesters also turned out in Alexandria, Suez, Minya and other Nile Delta cities.

ENGLEWOOD NATIVE DAVIS IS QUICKLY GROWING INTO THE NBA

By Bryan Crawford

Anthony Davis' basketball story is about as unlikely as they come. Two years ago, playing in the NBA was just a dream for the Englewood native who outgrew his clothes and his bed nearly as fast as he rose to hoops superstardom.

A 6-foot-2 guard who sprouts into an athletic, 6-foot-10 shot blocker is the equivalent of hitting the genetic lottery in basketball. Especially when you consider the way Davis parlayed it into becoming the top player in his high school class, a McDonald's All-American, a national championship winner at Kentucky, the No. 1 pick in the 2012 NBA Draft and the youngest player in U.S. Olympic basketball history to win a gold medal.

Not surprising, the 19-year-old Davis is enjoying every minute.

"Man, it's been a blast going up against some of your idols," Davis said of playing in the NBA while averaging 16 points and eight rebounds this season for New Orleans. "Guys that you always looked up to, and now you're playing against them on the court. It's been a good experience."

Much of that experience came with Team USA as Davis was the youngest player on a squad full of All-Stars and future Hall of Famers. Learning from them was an invaluable experience and boosted Davis' confidence going into his rookie season.

"I had a chance to play in the Olympics with a lot of superstars like LeBron [James], Kobe [Bryant], Kevin [Durant], Carmelo [Anthony], guys like that. So I'm not as in shock as some other rookies are," he said. "But it's definitely fun getting to go up against those guys, guys that you'd play with on '[NBA] 2K' or watching them on TV or supporting them by being a fan, but now it's a different story because you're trying to beat them."

New Orleans coach Monty Williams said he's pleased with the rookie's competitiveness and progress thus far. However, he added it will be awhile before Davis will truly feel, comfortable in the NBA.

"He's still wide-eyed a little bit, but I think he's a lot more calm now than he was in the beginning," Williams said. "But I think it takes time. I think he's got to play at least 30 to 35 games and go through the league a little bit, but then we'll see a better A.D."

If his trademark unibrow—which really is trademarked—is his calling card off the court, thunderous blocked shots are his signature on

So what's his secret?

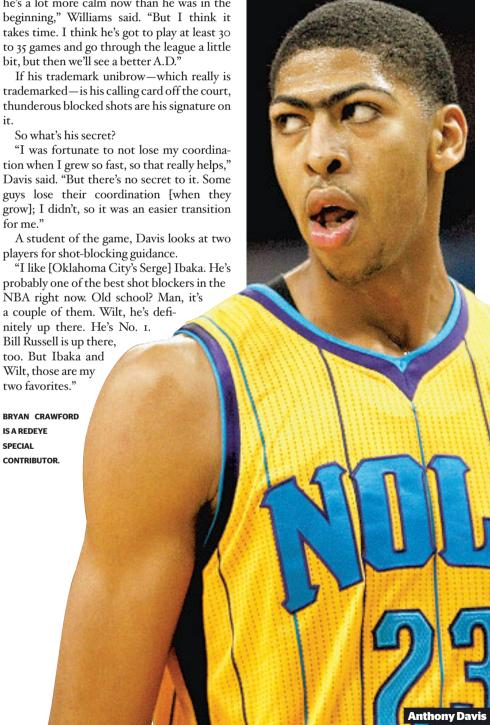

"I was fortunate to not lose my coordination when I grew so fast, so that really helps," Davis said. "But there's no secret to it. Some guys lose their coordination [when they grow]; I didn't, so it was an easier transition for me."

A student of the game, Davis looks at two players for shot-blocking guidance.

"I like [Oklahoma City's Serge] Ibaka. He's probably one of the best shot blockers in the NBA right now. Old school? Man, it's a couple of them. Wilt, he's defi-Bill Russell is up there, too. But Ibaka and Wilt, those are my two favorites."

FOR REDEYE

Even if you're unfamiliar with Anthony Davis' work on the basketball court, you probably recognize his unibrow. When he was at Kentucky, everywhere vou looked you saw fans with unibrow signs and T-shirts, and some even wore fake ones to games.

It got to the point that the university had to send cease-and-desist letters to people looking to cash in on Davis' most distinguishing feature. But the whole time, Davis and his family enjoyed the popularity.

Even his mom, Erainer, once showed up at a Kentucky game sporting a penciled-in unibrow.

The NCAA, of course, wouldn't allow Davis to profit from it while he was at Kentucky, but once he declared for the NBA Draft, he immediately trademarked "Fear the Brow" and "Raise the Brow."

And now that he's in the NBA, it's even more popular.

Case in point: Rapper Ludacris dressed as Davis for Halloween this year. Sporting Davis' No. 23 Hornets jersey, Luda went so far as to have a makeup artist outfit him with his own unibrow.

Despite being more than a foot shorter than Davis, the rapper bore an uncanny resemblance to the South Side superstar, setting the bar—er, brow—very high.

Temperatures might be dropping outside, but there's been little cool down in Chicago's live music scene.

December continues the city's hot streak with shows from a cadre of stellar R&B singers (Miguel, Bilal), the gang of Brandon Flowers-led Killers and a smattering of must-see locals capping big years (White Mystery, the Eternals, JC Brooks & the Uptown Sound). ANDYDOWNNOIS AREDEVE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR

OS MUTANTES

Saturday at Lincoln Hall

The 1960s Brazilian psych-rock pioneers, led by lone original member Sergio Dias, combine Beatles-esque sonic experimentation with percussive Latin rhythms.

KREAYSHAWN

Saturday at Metro

The cartoonish "Gucci Gucci" rapper spends the bulk of her full-length debut, "Somethin' Bout Kreay," dissing her haters, a group that will only multiply as this shrill album makes its rounds.

MIGUEL

Saturday at Arie Crown Theater
On "Kaleidoscope Dream," R&B prodigy Miguel delivers his romantic come-ons amidst a musical funhouse of warped synthesizers, mutant drums and distorted samples.

ALABAMA SHAKES

Saturday at Riviera Theatre

All the uncertainty of their full-length debut, "Boys & Girls," melts away when frontwoman/force of nature Brittany Howard and crew hit the stage.

BAND OF HORSES

Sunday at Chicago Theatre

On "Mirage Rock," the South Carolina quintet drifts between Appalachian folk and dreamy, Southern-rock-inspired numbers.

KID KOALA & HIS INCREDIBLE DANCING MACHINES

Saturday at Double Door

The Canadian DJ, who grew up idolizing the Muppets, takes an equally playful approach to his own music, sampling everything from the Peanuts' Halloween special to "On Top of Spaghetti."

DJ SHADOW

Dec. 7 at the Mid

The California DJ has dabbled in everything from hyphy to doom-laden art rock.

HIGH ON FIRE

Dec. 7 at Double Door

The Matt Pike-led metalheads headlined Dark Lord Day at Three Floyds Brewing earlier this year—a fitting choice, considering the crew sports a sound as black and heavy as the brewpub's famed Russian Imperial Stout.

POLYPHONIC SPREE

Dec. 11 at Logan Square Auditorium

Logan Square will be filled to near-capacity when the sprawling art-pop crew hits town. And that's before the audience starts filtering in.

CARRIE UNDERWOOD

SUFJAN STEVENS

Dec. 15 at Metro

The indie-rock icon might love the holiday even more than all the world's children combined.

ANDREW BIRD

Dec. 19-21 at Fourth Presbyterian Church Chicago's song-Bird returns to the Fourth Presbyterian Church for a three-night residency.

TALIB KWELI

Dec. 21 at the Mid

The skilled NYC rapper approaches his songs the way a master jazzman might approach a solo, weaving in and around the beat with practiced ease.

FLOSSTRADAMUS

Dec. 22 at Metro

Chicago DJs Josh Young and Curt Cameruci, collectively known as Flosstradamus, treat their concerts like outsize house parties.

WHITE MYSTERY

Dec. 31 at Logan Square Auditorium

Chicago's brother-sister garage rock duo should be in fine form for this local gig, having lived on the road for much of 2012.

JC BROOKS & THE UPTOWN SOUND

Dec. 31 at Mayne Stage

It's been a big year for the local retrosoul collective, which sold out Metro in April and followed with an ecstatic set at this summer's Lollapalooza.

THE ETERNALS

Dec. 31 at Hideout

The Chicago crew is virtually unclassifiable, and its ever-shifting sound draws upon avant-garde jazz, dub, hip-hop, punk and more.

WANDA JACKSON

Dec. 31 at Double Door

The rockabilly singer paired with Justin Townes Earle for her latest album "Unfinished Business," a streamlined effort that keeps the focus on Jackson's still-lively growl.

By Kyle Kramer

REDEYE SOUND BOARD In one of the more telling lines on "Wu-Block," Sheek Louch says that he's "never heard of a blog." For the album's purposes, this is a boast: The only indications that this collaboration between the rapper and his fellow '90s

New York rap eminence Ghostface Killah is a recent occurrence are a couple stray iPhone references and the fact that the year 2012 is printed on the cover.

The biggest surprise an album bringing together members of the Wu-Tang Clan and The LOX has to offer is the fact that it hasn't been made before.

This isn't necessarily a bad thing. Sheek Louch and Ghostface Killah both are fantastic rappers, and every guest from their respective groups offers a solid performance as well. Thankfully, there's nothing even remotely resembling a crossover concession.

More than anything, the two provide a reminder, in the Rick Ross era, of the charms of a time in which a successful rap song could be a vivid description of guys hanging out in a living room. Ghostface in particular is one of the most detailed lyricists ever, and the fact that he takes the time to point out things like wearing Brookstone slippers or reading L. Ron Hubbard (side note: IS GHOSTFACE KILLAH BECOMING A SCIENTOLO-GIST?) makes for extremely fun listening.

While there surely are people who are thrilled to finally see a combination of Wu-Tang and LOX rappers on a track, "Wu-Block" doesn't offer much more than what it claims. The style here is reliable but outdated, particularly due to all the awkward songs about robbing people. Longtime fans will be happy, and neophytes might find it a convenient point of entry, but plenty of others will be just as happy revisiting familiar classics.

ALBUM REVIEW

Girl on Fire Alicia Keys

By Kyle Kramer

Following the success of Adele's widely accessible "21," Alicia Keys must have been tempted to head into the recording process for "Girl on Fire" with a conservative outlook. Keys, who owns the soulful piano ballad lane, is one of the few artists who can credibly and reliably deliver an album of just-edgy-enough comfort R&B that the music-buying public (aka moms) can get behind en masse.

So the fact that her fifth album shoots for a more modern, adventurous rebranding—it opens with a song called "Brand New Me"—is, in theory, admirable. The album features production from experimental London electronic phenom Jamie xx and a song co-written by Frank Ocean. Plus, Nicki Minaj drops two brief verses on the title track. However, "modern" quickly becomes shorthand for wispy songs that sound as though they're being breathed heavily rather than sung.

Keys, who's gotten married and had a baby since her last album, is prone to drifting into heavy sentimentalism on these topics. This mode can become a drag, although it becomes more entertaining once you realize that the subject of these love songs is Swizz Beatz—the guy who produced "Ruff Ryders Anthem."

While songs like "When It's All Over" and "Only Thing" do provide the barest hint of experimentation to some success, it's only when Keys lets loose vocally, such as on highlight "Tears Always Win," that the album becomes truly satisfying.

In this case, sticking to a more obvious formula might have been more rewarding.

'The Paper Machete' moves to The Green Mill

By Julia Borcherts

Can a live lit show about all things current find happiness in a jazz club steeped in a century of history? That's what Christopher Piatt aims to find out this weekend as he moves "The Paper Machete" to the storied music club.

Piatt, a former Time Out Chicago theater editor, launched the magazine-style revue in January 2010 at Lincoln Square bar Ricochet's. The weekly show of original essays about hot topics—which has included a lineup of guests like actor Michael Shannon ("Boardwalk Empire"), comedian Julia Sweeney and Weather Underground founder William Ayers—eventually outgrew the small venue, and Piatt moved it up the street to the Horseshoe.

We caught up with Piatt to find out more about the series and his plans to integrate the show into its new home at The Green Mill.

How does "The Paper Machete" differ from the storytelling scene?

In the storytelling scene, the performers talk about their lives. In the "Machete", they talk about what's going on in the world. It's a show about current events and pop culture. We call it a "salon in a saloon."

Every week the material is made fresh from the headlines, the same way hotshot chefs work with only fresh ingredients. Plus, we mix in vaudeville characters and some improv. And we have a bird puppet. And really hot bands.

So aside from people standing at microphones, we're not really like a storytelling event.

How does your journalism background inform the tone of the show?

The main ingredient in the show is essays written in third-person prose—I know that doesn't sound too sexy, but people really like it—that's a heavily journalistic influence. Plus, I'm always obsessed with whatever's going on right now—I'm a huge cable news junkie—and how we can incorporate that into the show. I try to treat my job like that of an editor-in-chief.

How has the show evolved since its inception?

The very first "Machete" back at Ricochet's had no comics in it. It was all spoken-word and performance-art types. But we eventually assumed the identity of a comedy show. The Reader named us "Best Comedy Series" and we've worked with many of the city's best talents from the improv, sketch and standup scenes. The show has plenty of serious content, but the best shows are the best ones because of the laughs.

What prompted the move to the Green Mill?

Long story short, we asked them and they said yes. It's a spectacular venue and I'd frankly dreamed of eventually moving there when I first started the "Machete." So it's a pipe dream that came true.

What influence do you hope that this new venue will have on the show?

At the Mill, the musical possibilities are endless. We now have access to a piano and an organ, so we can feature jazz, cabaret, classical and gospel in the mix. We also have two stages to play with, which is great for us. Content-wise, we'll still have great comic essays about the news, but now it will seem like they're being performed by gangsters.

THE PAPER MACHETE

Go: 3 p.m. Saturday at The Green Mill, 4802 N. Broadway Tickets: Free: 773-878-5552; thepapermacheteshow.com

From the beginning, it's been held on Saturday afternoons in bars. Had you done any market research into optimum times for Chicagoans to get drunk and discuss current events?

{Laughs} We've never done research, but I can say with authority that you don't have to twist the average Chicagoan's arm to drink on a Saturday afternoon. City-wide afternoon thirst has, in fact, been very good to the "Machete."

What are some memorable live essays you've heard at the "Machete"?

William Ayers, who's a "Machete" regular, read a beautiful essay about the late Andrew Breitbart and Tucker Carlson coming over to his house for dinner. And I have particularly fond memories of the comics Tim Sniffen and Brendan Dowling playing Chris Brown's tattoo artists.

Who are your featured guest readers for Saturday's show?

A bunch of our tried-and-true regulars: Katie Rich from The Second City mainstage, the playwright Phil Dawkins from Victory Gardens ["Failure: A Love Story"] and Samantha Irby, who writes the blog, "Bitches Gotta Eat." Plus Chad the Bird, our resident puppet, and a killer funk and soul band called Fatbook. It should be a great event.

Yes, there still are search engines other than Google. Bing released its most-searched (Binged?) people of the year this week and—shocker of all shockers—no one from RedEye was on the list. So we decided to Bing these people for ourselves—and discovered some pretty funny drop-downs in the search field. Take a look at our favorites. (Also, the background video the entire time we were doing this was a lemur licking a bamboo stick, and it was super gross. THIS IS WHY NO ONE USES BING.) DAMORAMSTRIBUME.COM I GREDEYEDAMA

I know it sounds crazy, but if I have to stay on probation to see Ke$ha, it might be worth it."

—Jenelle Evans, on Monday's episode of "Teen Mom 2." Prior to getting locked up for violating her probation, the always-in-trouble young mother was negotiating with her attorney to see if he could get the terms of her jail time changed so she could use her concert tickets.
